

THE LONDON SCHOOL
OF ECONOMICS AND POLITICAL SCIENCE

SC.DTP South Coast
Doctoral Training
Partnership

SECOND EDITION • THURSDAY 5 NOVEMBER 2026 • LSE, LONDON

Being an academic in Population Studies

A masterclass for PhD students

2026 theme: Demographic studies of inequality

Organised by the LSE, UBEL, and South Coast ESRC Doctoral Training Partnerships, with the British Society for Population Studies.

The day brings together scholars from across the discipline to discuss how population research measures and explains inequalities in health, mortality, fertility, family life, migration and ageing. Sessions combine research presentations with reflections on building an academic career. The first edition, in November 2025, brought together over 30 PhD students and 10 faculty from across the UK.

Open to PhD students in population studies or related subjects at a UK university.

Your PhD should be in population studies or a related subject. We cannot accept registrations from master's students, postdoctoral researchers, staff, or students registered at universities outside the UK. You will be asked to confirm your university and PhD registration when you sign up. Places are limited and allocated on a first-come, first-served basis.

When	Thursday 5 November 2026, 9.30-16.30. Timings will be sent to registered participants.
Where	London School of Economics and Political Science, Houghton Street, London WC2A 2AE. Room details will be sent to registered participants.
Register	Sign up on Eventbrite: https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/being-an-academic-in-population-studies
Programme	Speakers and the full programme will be posted on the registration page.

TRAVEL SUPPORT

- Students funded by the South Coast Doctoral Training Partnership (SCDTP) should claim travel and accommodation costs from their Research Training Support Grant (RTSG).
- All other students can apply for one of a limited number of travel bursaries. Email Dr. Adrien Allorant (adrien.allorant@soton.ac.uk) with a provisional budget by October 16th, 16.00.

Questions about the day: adrien.allorant@soton.ac.uk